

TEACHERS' TOOLKIT

Section 1

Making the Case for the Arts in Your School

This toolkit has been created by A New Direction to help you and your school more effectively use and promote the arts and cultural education as a critical component of a balanced, exciting curriculum. The toolkit is comprised of seven sections:

- Making the Case for the Arts in Your School
- Leadership and Governance
- Self-Assessment and Quality
- Partnerships
- Continuing Professional Development (CPD)
- Documentation, Evaluation and Assessing Impact
- Creating an Arts Policy

In each, you'll find basic guidance and definitions of terms, Top Tips for success, exercises and activities, and a list of relevant resources for further research and discussion. Some sections also include Case Studies of schools that have been particularly successful at delivering exciting arts activity.

Each section can be used as a stand-alone guide, or taken as a whole. At the end of each section is a box titled 'Pulling it together', and if you complete this section in all seven toolkit sections you should be ready to take your school's arts programme to the next level.

Most of what's in the toolkit has been inspired directly by best practice in schools, so don't hesitate to tell us how we can make this a better, more effective resource for you.

You can contact us at schools@anewdirection.org.uk.

ABOUT A NEW DIRECTION

A New Direction helps London create, think and learn.

We work to ensure that all children and young people get the most out of London's extraordinary creative and cultural offer.

We want London to be a city where -

- cultural education is the best in the world
- young people are able to access and influence culture
- the right platforms are in place to identify and nourish young people's creative talents

This is the right of all young Londoners - regardless of wealth, geography or luck.

We work through influencing, case-making, supporting and showing why culture and creativity matters to children, young people and the future of London.

- We work with partners to develop new ways for arts and culture to reach more children and young people
- We work with children and young people to make sure their views are heard and they have opportunities to be creative
- We work to attract new funding and investment to support arts and culture for young people in London.
- We support and train professionals working with young people to provide the best opportunities possible

- We make the case for the value of creative learning and cultural education and use this to push forward structural change

How we work with schools

AND works to support schools to deliver high quality arts and cultural education and to connect with London's arts and cultural organisations, resources and opportunities, so that they can give their students a broad and balanced education.

We do this through

- Conferences, marketplaces and networking events
- INSET
- CPD, including leadership development

We also support schools to successfully apply for Artsmark and deliver Arts Award.

We campaign for schools to dedicate part of their Pupil Premium to arts and cultural activity.

Making the Case for the Arts in Your School

Building great arts provision is about demonstrating value to pupils, to teachers and leadership, and to parents and carers. The arts have value in and of themselves, but they can also support other subject areas and help to develop critical life, learning and professional skills.

We would suggest exploring the following ideas to help you build your case and prepare to convince others of its merits:

- Why are the arts important for your school?
- What are the barriers to developing stronger arts provision at your school?
- Who are your allies?
- Making the case

1. Why are the Arts Important for Your School?

Each school will have different reasons for engaging with the arts. These often include:

- Whole-child education: an appreciation of beauty, talent and culture are widely considered to be important to a child's development, and to their feeling a sense of belonging in society
- Building community: assemblies, exhibitions and performances are uniquely powerful ways to bring together pupils, teachers, parents/carers and other stakeholders.
- Building confidence: pupils who sometimes struggle in 'core' subjects often find success in the arts, which gives them a new connection to learning and can spur greater success in other subjects.
- Cross-subject learning: many schools use dance, drama, music and art to support learning in other areas, as a way of animating key ideas and themes, e.g. drawing maps of the Renaissance world, or setting Shakespeare's poems to music.

You might think about the importance of the arts in terms of pedagogy (improving quality of provision / teaching, raising standards) and principle (school values, your school curriculum, developing the whole child).

School Improvement/Development Plan (SIP/SDP)

At the heart of every school's teaching and learning programme is its School Improvement Plan (SIP), sometimes also called a School Development Plan (SDP). Whatever the name, the SIP/SDP provides guidance for the present as well as aspiration for the future, and the arts should play an essential part in advancing key SIP/SDP aims and objectives.

TOP TIP

A 2011 study by the Cultural Learning Alliance had the following findings:

- Learning through arts and culture improves attainment in all subjects
- Participation in structured arts activities increases cognitive abilities
- Students from low income families who take part in arts activities at school are three times more likely to get a degree
- Employability of students who study arts subjects is higher and they are more likely to stay in employment
- Students who engage in the arts at school are twice as likely to volunteer and are 20% more likely to vote as young adults

Advance Your SIP/SDP in Your School

Draw up a list of 10 areas where the arts help advance, or could help advance, your SIP/SDP. Think both whole school and in terms of year groups, cultural groups, and areas of particular interest and challenge. Think about your in-school community and your community of parents, carers and external partners.

10 AREAS

Advance Your SIP/SDP in Your School

Once you've completed step 1, rank your selections using the prompts below.

Importance to the school

Potential of the arts to effect/influence change

Distance to travel

Advance Your SIP/SDP in Your School

Select the top three areas from your list and for each give short answers to the questions in the boxes below.

A. What would success look like?

B. What do you have and what do you need?

C. What's the first step you're going to take?

C. What's the first step you're going to take?

2. What are the Barriers to Developing Stronger Arts Provision at Your School?

Is it about money? Scheduling? Planning? A lack of interest on the part of key staff or school leadership? A broad perception that the arts are of lower value than other subjects? Be honest, and be clear.

MINI EXERCISE

Write down the barriers that you think are most prevalent in your school.

BARRIERS

Think about how you can overcome the barriers and identify your next steps.

Mini Case Study

Create three mini case studies – projects, events, individual pupil performance – where the arts had an obvious, positive impact in your school. Try to find examples that cover a wide variety of arts subjects, pupils and connections to other subjects.

3. Who are Your Allies?

This could be another arts teacher, or just another member of staff you get on with and feel you can work with; it might be one person, or a small, informal team who could meet at breaks.

You're looking for someone with whom you can bounce around ideas and proposals, even if you're ultimately the person tasked with carrying them out. Ideally, you're looking for allies with a passion for improving learning in your school and in their classroom, and for taking some risks therein.

Your allies might be classroom colleagues, members of your Senior Leadership Team, or school governors. They might even be part of your broader parent/carer community, whether on your PTA or more generally.

MINI EXERCISE

List your existing allies.

Define Your Allies

Choose your top four target allies from the list you have created. Think about how you might begin a conversation with each of them about building your school's arts provision, and how they might be part of it. If it's a small group, think about having regular, informal meetings to discuss ideas, approaches, and successes. Try the Elevator Pitch exercise on the next few pages if you are not sure how to begin your conversation with them.

Elevator Pitch

An average person in casual conversation speaks between 100-120 words per minute. But what if you don't have much time to make your case?

Write down everything that's important about the arts in your school - try to fill the box below, or a side of A4 paper.

Arts in your school

Elevator Pitch

Choose the five most important ideas from step 1; using these, create two 'pitches' of 10 and 30 seconds. After this, think about how you might alter your pitch for different allies, e.g. SLT, parents.

4. Making the Case

You've now identified some mini case studies and pulled together some allies to help you make the case. But how do you begin conversations more broadly? Schools are busy places and teachers' time is hard-pressed.

We've found that staff meetings, particularly INSET, can be a great way of generating positive conversation about the current and potential impact of the arts across the school.

The Open Space method overleaf is a great way of doing that.

Notes from previous activities

A large, empty rectangular box with a light green border, intended for taking notes from previous activities. The box is currently blank.

Open Space/Tagging

This exercise is useful for generating discussion about the positive potential for arts to drive classroom and whole-school change. Ideal for INSETs.

How to use this tool

- Step 1 Single sheets of flipchart paper (or photocopy the templates overleaf on A3 paper) are placed around a room on tables or on the floor and lots of markers and ballpoint pens placed around each sheet. At the centre of each sheet is an art form, e.g., art, dance, drama, music, etc.
- Step 2 3-6 teachers per table begin by discussing, then writing down, how that particular art form could help in their teaching, or more broadly with other school development goals.
- Step 3 Groups move around the tables whenever they choose, discussing and brainstorming reactions, perspectives, and responses to the art form in question. Drawing and other non-text responses are encouraged.
- Step 4 Groups should stay with a sheet as long as they want; returning to sheets is fine.
- Step 5 After a set time period (usually 20-30 minutes) groups return to their original table and read what's on their sheet. Select your top three ideas and be prepared to make a case for them to the wider group: if there's time, each group should discuss their top three.
- Step 6 As a whole group, draw up a list of the top 10 ideas you've all come up with to use the arts for whole school improvement and agree next steps.
